Objective

Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:

- Explore best practices in supply chain and procurement management.
- Understand the role of procurement within a business.
- Develop effective training programs to upskill your team in the more productive category management procedures.
- Evaluate and review your current processes and amend where required.
- Create mutually beneficial relationships with clients, customers, and partners within the supply chain.
- Understand how errors in procurement management can translate into larger problems elsewhere in the business.

- Identify areas of risk and create processes to mitigate them.
- Develop value-adding management styles based on company goals and KPIs.
- Increase your negotiation and communication skills to obtain the best value products.

Audience

This course is perfect for people within a procurement team or any managers wishing to learn more about a business supply chain. However, it would be most beneficial for:

- Procurement Personnel
- Supply Chain Management
- Business Owners
- Directors
- Operations Managers
- Supervisors
- Project planners
- Quality Assurance Professionals
- Finance Executives
- Marketing Executives
- Warehouse Managers

Training Methodology

This course takes an interactive approach to learning using real-life case studies to demonstrate failures and successes within a supply chain and their impacts on the wider business.

Participants will create their own category management systems using tried and tested techniques to discover the pain points in the supply chain journey. Group discussions will develop frameworks to remove performance, productivity, and quality issues and improve the procurement process while remaining within a set budget.

Summary

Procurement is one of the most important functions within any successful business. It includes applying the right category information, understanding the different contractual functions developed between organisations, and developing effective relationships with supply chains to ensure timely and quality deliveries to clients and customers.

To maximise the value of an effective procurement team, you need to determine the most efficient technology and systems and review processes and procedures to ensure the most productive working methods, skills and techniques. It's also essential that your employees fully understand their role and how this affects the wider business. They require accessible training, a program built from clear goals and targets, and a performance management strategy to help push procurement forward towards a positive outcome.

Effective category management is the number one requirement for successful procurement practices. It allows the team to manage suppliers, inventories, and quality products to maintain excellent service.
