Summary

The oil and gas industry is an incredibly competitive global market, and it's tough to stay ahead of the game. Because of the saturated market, it's important to find a unique and innovative marketing strategy and develop a positive brand image to attract other businesses. Business-to-business sales are especially important to a petroleum company, as these types of partnerships can lead to mutually beneficial relationships, bring in the most money, and also present a positive reputation to other clients and consumers.

To stay ahead of the competition and gain the best deals you will be required to negotiate your position, show the benefits of using your organisation over others and understand the whole oil and gas arena to enable you to answer any tricky questions or concerns.

It's also essential to create a pre-planned action framework to display your marketing and distribution efforts and commercial foundations. This will present a strong, forward-thinking picture of your organisation and forecast future trends.
