Objective

Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:

- Understand the importance of effective classroom management within an educational facility.
- Recognise the consequences of poor classroom management on the organisation's performance and for the student's education.
- Value building positive relationships based upon trust and fairness.
- Evaluate the use of language and communication and how it can improve student engagement.
- Explore various methods and techniques to promote full engagement with the taught subjects.
- Consider each individual student's needs and abilities and arrange for additional help to those who require it.

Audience

This course is designed for anyone in education who is responsible for managing a classroom. It would be most beneficial for:

- Heads of Departments
- SEN Teaching Assistants
- Subject/Course Leaders
- Headteachers
- Deputy Headteachers
- SEN Managers
- Teachers

Training Methodology

This course uses a variety of adult learning styles to aid full understanding and comprehension. Participants will review case studies of real-world classrooms from varying educational facilities to highlight different methods used to increase student engagement, meriting performance, and areas where students face unnecessary difficulty.

They will participate in various learning methods to guarantee a full understanding of the taught content and any related skills. This combination of methods includes seminars, video materials, open discussions, and group activities. The group activities, in particular, allow the participants to demonstrate their new skills and engage in constructive feedback from their peers.

Summary

Teachers and other important personnel must understand how to efficiently manage their students in a classroom setting to guarantee their safety and an engaging learning environment. Poor classroom management often leads students to fall behind their peers and fail to meet expectations.

Classroom management encompasses everything that transpires within the classroom, from the topics being taught to the communication method and the learning activities provided to the students. Regardless of age, students will struggle to engage with the topics and focus on their learning if the teachers or teaching assistants do not provide adequate care.

Communication is a vital aspect of any classroom, and a teacher must be able to communicate with the students in different ways, using varying language and tone of voice to encourage a particular outcome. They must also understand how to meet students on their level and create a positive relationship built upon trust and appropriate attention.

Furthermore, a classroom leader must also be competent in SEN education and how to meet best the needs of disabled students or those who need extra support with their learning. Those with SEN will often require additional 1-to-1 care, specialised equipment, and other accommodations to ensure they can progress alongside their non-SEN peers.
