Summary

At their core, a destination management executive (DME) possesses an unparalleled depth of local knowledge about the area or region they represent. Their expertise spans the intricate coordination and execution of diverse elements, ranging from program logistics to event activities. Essentially, a DME serves as a highly specialised consultant adept at overseeing every aspect of global event programming.

This course delves into the intricacies of destination management, offering participants a comprehensive understanding of how destination organisations and their various departments function.

This course explores the role of destination organisations within communities, shedding light on how these entities contribute to and enhance their surrounding areas. Participants will gain valuable insights into selling a destination to business and leisure travellers, rounding out their expertise as destination management professionals.

With a concentrated focus on vision, leadership, productivity, and the effective implementation of business strategies, this program invites professionals to embark on or advance their journey, elevating their careers and augmenting their industry knowledge, skills, and professional credibility to undertake the esteemed Certified Destination Management Executive (CDME) exam.
