

Expert Training & Development

Duration: 5 Days

Language: en

Course Code: MG2-173

Objective

Upon completion of this course, participants will be able to:

- Articulate the strategic importance of training, emphasise the alignment of training initiatives with organisational strategy, advocate for training across all levels, and foster collaboration with managers and supervisors.
- Formulate practical approaches for conducting Training Needs Assessments (TNA), ensuring the thorough identification of learning requirements within the organisation.
- Explore strategies for identifying and selecting internal trainers and engaging external consultants to supplement training efforts.
- Illustrate the effectiveness of training programs through comprehensive evaluation, spanning from participant reactions to quantifiable Return On Investment (ROI).
- Understand essential competencies for training professionals, delineating key behaviours and actions necessary for success in the field.

Audience

This course is designed for anyone responsible for developing an in-house training programme within a business. It would be most beneficial for:

- Business Owners
- Training & Development Professionals
- Special Skills Learning Assistants
- SEN Professionals
- Onboarding Personnel
- Recruiters
- Project Managers
- Workshop Coordinators

Training Methodology

This course uses a variety of adult learning styles to aid full understanding and comprehension. Participants will receive various learning style assessments to determine the different learning styles that could occur within a range of trainees.

They will then work together to understand how different learning activities could be presented to maximise the gains from a successful training group. They will also work to discover the best people to roll out training sessions and understand the importance of finding the right subject matter experts for the job.

Summary

Becoming a training and development expert requires education, experience, and skills. These roles identify the organisation's skill gaps and learning needs. Conducting thorough assessments can determine where employees require training to enhance their performance and contribute more effectively to the company's goals.

Dedicated training and development professionals design and implement programs to address these needs. They ensure that the training initiatives align with the organisation's objectives and are delivered efficiently to maximise their impact.

These roles facilitate the transfer of knowledge and expertise within the company. Providing employees with continuous learning and skill development opportunities helps foster a culture of innovation and growth. Training and development specialists play a crucial role in talent retention. Employees are more likely to stay with a company that invests in their professional development and offers opportunities for advancement.

Dedicated training and development roles within a business are essential for fostering a skilled workforce, driving organisational success, and maintaining a competitive edge in the marketplace.
