- Gain insights into inspiring, influencing, and fostering high-performing teams for enhanced organisational effectiveness.
- Evaluate the fundamental elements of competencies and distinguish the nuances between each.
- Create a competency framework and model by extracting essential skills from business plans.
- Implement competencies in the recruitment and selection processes to ensure a well-matched workforce.
- Use competencies to assess training needs, identify talent pools, and formulate succession plans.
- Acquire strategic leadership and management skills to elevate team performance to new heights.
- Demonstrate confidence in deploying a variety of effective management techniques and tools.

Audience

This course is designed for anyone responsible for training and developing effective managers within a company or people inspired to develop on their own management journey. It would be most beneficial for:

- Business Owners
- Executives
- Directors
- Line Managers
- Operations Managers
- Supervisors
- Team Leaders
- Project Managers
- Finance Managers
- IT Managers
- Trainee Managers
- HR Managers

Training Methodology

This course uses a variety of adult learning styles to aid full understanding and comprehension. Participants will view real-world scenarios and case studies on videos to determine the best and worst ways to handle practical situations as a manager. They will review various management tools in order to prepare them for important decision-making and financial issues.

They will also undergo group activities to understand the impact of their decisions on the environment, economy and the wider business to emphasise the importance of planning and effective project management. They will then take part in role-playing activities in order to deal with difficult situations and improve communication skills to attract and negotiate with key stakeholders.

Summary

Senior management competency development is critical to ensuring effective leadership within organisations. This process involves targeted initiatives to enhance senior leaders' skills, knowledge, and capabilities.

These development areas often focus on various competencies, including strategic thinking, decision-making, communication, and change management. By investing in senior management competency development, using executive education, mentorship opportunities, leadership workshops, and exposure to real-world challenges, organisations can cultivate leaders who are better equipped to navigate complex business landscapes, lead teams with agility, and drive sustainable success.

Senior management competency development benefits individual leaders and contributes to the organisation's overall resilience and competitiveness in today's dynamic and fast-paced business environment.
