Training Methodology

Teaching takes place in various settings, including face-to-face classroom teaching. It will ensure that participants can expand their knowledge of the subject and increase their skill set. The course is delivered via various methods by a specialist tutor. This will include PowerPoint presentations, reviewing articles and other relevant materials, group or individual exercises and discussions. There may be some independent work set, and the course will require submitting articles to demonstrate understanding and an end-of-course test. Note-taking is encouraged, and you are welcome to use electronic devices.

The course manual will form part of the learning but will give you references for the future. You are encouraged to ask questions and, if needed, spend time one-on-one with your tutor to review any issues. You can network with peers in similar roles during your time in the classroom.

Summary

Building business relationships is vital no matter what industry you are in. It secures the prosperity and future growth of every company. The difference between thriving and failure is understanding and building good relationships with your partners, suppliers, and customers.

Many large contracts have been won on the concept of good reputation and trust. Whether you have established relationships or are forging new ones, how you do this builds a picture used to decide how well you will be able to work with the customer, supplier, or partner, so it is essential to make it good.

As part of this course, delegates will learn and use the proven methodology that has been shown to garner excellent and robust relationships. Business relationship management professionals need to have an armoury of skills and knowledge to ensure that they present the business in a good light and secure relationships of trust and prosperity.
