The course includes real-world case studies to understand what's possible regarding a supplier and role-playing activities to help supply-chain managers negotiate beneficial and long-term contracts.

Summary

In all businesses, the suppliers that provide your products for sale, bring in technology and office equipment or supply your uniforms, cleaning supplies and health and safety equipment are essential to successful operational management and growth.

Your business can't function without an effective supply chain. A good relationship with a trustworthy supplier that meets your requirements for product quality and delivers on time, with care, and within your budget is an absolute necessity.

To find a supplier that maintains business continuity, you will need to set effective evaluation methods and understand negotiation techniques to get a contract in place that suits both parties and ensures the successful transfer of goods for the future.
